Nokia Buys Software Maker for $8.1 Billion

By KEVIN J. O'BRIEN
Published: October 1, 2007

BERLIN, Oct. 1 — Nokia, the world's biggest cellphone maker, said today that it had agreed to pay $8.1 billion for Navteq, the maker of digital mapping and navigational software based in Chicago, as it seeks to migrate satellite-based location services onto its range of phones.

The purchase, which must be approved by American regulators as well as Navteq shareholders, will bolster Nokia, analysts said, in efforts to compete with companies like Apple, whose iPhone comes with navigational software from Google.

Nokia shares fell as much as 4 percent in New York

Nokia's HERE Value is Down to €2 Billion

When announcing its financial earnings today Nokia revealed it now estimates the value of its mapping and LBS subsidiary HERE to €2 Billion.

See below the entire explanation from Nokia's financial press release:

"Nokia's continuing operations reported an operating loss in the third quarter 2014 as a result of the EUR 1.2 billion goodwill impairment charge related to HERE."

Each week, a new and complete copy of all data in OpenStreetMap is made available as a compressed XML file, along with a smaller file with complete metadata for all changes made since the previous week.

Using The Data

You are granted permission to use OpenStreetMap data by the OpenStreetMap License, which also describes your obligations.

You can process the file or extracts with a variety of tools. Osmosis is a general-purpose command-line tool for converting the data among different formats and databases, and Osm2pgsql is a tool for importing the data into a Postgis database for rendering maps.

Processed coastline data derived from OSM data is also needed for rendering usable maps, and can be found in a single shapefile (360MB).

Extracts & Mirrors

The complete planet is very large, so you may prefer to use one of several periodic extracts (individual countries or states) from third parties. GeoFabrik.de and BBBike.org are two providers of extracts with up-to-date worldwide coverage.
